

MIG – the popular quiz game is now free on Appstore and Android Market.

On the 12th December MIG (Mobile Intelligence Games) will be released in the UK for free!

This hugely successful app was previously priced at £1.79 but now will be available completely free of charge to increase public awareness and add to the growing user fan-base.

MIG has stayed in the top 25 most popular iPhone app list in Scandinavia, since just after it was released.

MIG for iPhone, iPod Touch and Android has been created to be a game that you play with a group of people, just like a classic board game. Most mobile phone games are single user orientated.

“We have developed a computer game that is not like a computer game, but more of a physical game.” Says Helena Liewendahl, Compete Now, creators of MIG.

The hands-on approach in the user interface gives the player the means to control the game. The phone is passed around between the players, who in turn ask the questions and score the answers. This game is social, fun and challenging! Just shake the phone to roll the dice and as they say – ‘let the good times roll...’

“When people play games they talk and have fun. We wanted to transfer that feeling to the mobile phone”, says Helena Liewendahl.

MIG for iPhone, iPod Touch and Android includes over 700 questions specifically tailored for the UK.
